Nestled in the picturesque village of Eckington in the heart of rural Worcestershire, England, lies Eckington Manor cookery school and Lower End House and Farm. The cookery school is purpose built inside the framework of a Dutch barn and blends perfectly into the rural background. Each individual work station is superbly equipped with Aga or range cooker, fully stocked refrigerator and sink which have created the ultimate hands on working environment. The chefs "theatre style" demonstration stage is at the helm of the classroom. Two overhead TV screens display close-ups of the dishes being prepared. Courses range from demonstrations-only to one, two, and three day practical hands on courses. Specialist courses for Aga owners whether novice or experienced are a strong focus and run throughout the year and give owners the opportunity to learn some modern twists on classic Aga recipes, bringing this iconic cooker right up to date. Courses are designed to be fun and challenging in a relaxed environment and aimed at teaching the art of cookery using fresh, local and seasonal ingredients wherever possible, whilst allowing plenty of time for individual attention.
